June 21, 2007 –The Lewis County Genealogical Society will hold a workshop in place of our regular June meeting. This will be a “Beginner’s & Problem Solvers Workshop” from 1pm to 4pm. on Saturday. Many beginners getting the genealogy bug are unclear how to record the family information that they are gathering. The more experienced genealogists will be available on a one on one basis to work with beginners. An introduction is planned, after which the more advanced will work on solving problems and the beginners will learn how to record their information. This workshop is for all members as well as anyone interested in genealogy. Please plan to attend and offer your knowledge to someone new or learn something new from the group. If you have special interests, questions that can be researched for you prior to the workshop please call Margie Lloyd at 360-748-3069. Workshop is FREE! Bring your family information and we will help you.

Events/Meetings/Seminars:

May 20, 2008 – LCGS meeting will be in the meeting room at the Lewis County Historical Museum, 599 NW Front St, Chehalis, WA.; 7pm. The program will be presented by Gary Zimmerman, President of the Fiske Foundation. Gary will explain “Resources Available in Washington State”.

TIP

Send your Pedigree Chart to Libraries where your family has been known to live. All public libraries have file cabinets where they keep things received that have no other proper place. They are called vertical files. If you haven't looked in your local library, do so, you may be surprised what you find.

LCGS Website

Our website has undergone a few new changes – for the better. There is there a new design, with faster loading pages, and some new features, listed below:

Members Pedigree Charts (including surnames, email, and website). Add yours to the growing list online – just send your pedigree chart and contact email to one of our newsletter editors! Your personal website link may be included, if you'd like.

Cemeteries – now listed by geographical area to help locate.

Native-American page has a collection of website links by tribe and Pacific Northwest Research (not complete).

Newsletters – in the process of adding more to the list of past newsletters, available in PDF format (free link to PDF reader on page). There is an index with subject/topic/issue. A few of the subjects included a website where more information on the article was given – a direct link (underlined topic) is added for your convenience.

GUY WILLIAM KENNICOTT, M.D.:

Dr. Guy William Kennicott, proprietor of the Chehalis General Hospital and one of the leading physicians and surgeons of that city, was born on the 29th of January, 1859, in Chicago, Illinois, and is a son of Dr. William H. and Caroline (Chapman) Kennicott. His grandparents came to this country from England and were of English and Scotch descent. It was as early as 1831 that the doctor's father became a resident of Chicago, where he began the practice of medicine two years later. He was the owner of nine hundred and sixty acres of land situated fifteen miles from the courthouse in Chicago and now within the limits of that rapidly developing city. He became well known throughout that locality and died there in 1862. His widow long survived him and was making her home with her oldest son in California at the time of her death in 1912.

Dr. Kennicott of this review completed his literary education at Northwestern University of Evanston, Illinois, and later entered Rush Medical College, from which he was graduated with the degree of M. D. in 1885. For ten years he engaged in practice in Chicago but in the meantime visited the Sound country in 1893 and finally located in Chehalis in 1895. At that time the city contained a population of only about one thousand and the district round about was wild and unimproved. Very few roads had been laid out and few bridges built and in his early practice here the doctor rode horseback, carrying his medicines and instruments in old-fashioned saddlebags. No matter what kind the weather he never failed to answer a call and was often forced to make his horse swim the streams in the time of high water. He was called upon to minister to the sick throughout a wide territory and in this way he gained a very large acquaintance. The nature of his practice being largely surgical, Dr. Kennicott saw the need of a hospital at Chehalis and in 1900 erected what is now known as the Chehalis General Hospital, which is well equipped and can accommodate about fifteen patients. It is in charge of graduate nurses of experience and it admits cases of all kinds, being well patronized by people on the Pacific coast. At different times Dr. Kennicott has taken post graduate work in the east but recently his time as been so fully occupied that he has been unable to take a vacation or spend any time away from his work in Chehalis.

In 1892 the doctor was married in Union City, Washington, to Miss Harriet Foster Black, a daughter of William Black, who was a native of West Hebron, New York. The doctor and his wife have two children: Frances, who is now a senior at Reed College, Portland, Oregon; and Robert William, who is twelve years of age and is attending the public schools of Chehalis.

The family attend the Presbyterian church, of which Dr. Kennicott is now senior elder. He is also a member of the Knights of Pythias fraternity, the Ancient Order of United Workmen and the Citizens Club of Chehalis. Along the line of his profession he is connected with the county, state and American Medical Associations, and in politics he is an ardent republican. He was induced to locate in Chehalis on account of his health, which had been broken down by his practice in Chicago, but here he soon recovered and has never had occasion to regret his removal to the Sound country. Today he is a man of prominence in his community and stands high in the esteem of his professional brethren as well as in that of the general public.
