Events/Meetings/Seminars:

May 19th LCGS Meeting

A “Problem Solving” will be the focus of the May meeting. After the business meeting, we will determine how to best help the members with their problems. Problems and direction for all levels, from newbies to experienced genealogists will be welcome. Newbies or anyone who needs help can bring their family information. Both LCGS library and the museum library will both be open at 6:15 pm with the meeting beginning at 7 pm. Come join us at the Lewis County Historical Museum located at 599 NW Front St., Chehalis, WA.

June 16th LCGS Meeting

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE CONTEST

ended on April 17th. Marge Lloyd, 1st place won the Dinner for Two at the Great Wolf Lodge, a $50. value donated by Harriett Morley. Ed Schroeder was the 2nd place winner for the book “Walking with Your Ancestors” donated by Harriett Morley. Congratulations to both winners. Thank you Harriett for your generous contributions to the society Library Chairperson needed to organize the volunteers working on the weekends in our library this summer at the historical museum. From Memorial Day to Labor Day, our volunteers serve as hosts on Saturday and Sunday each weekend to help the museum out. We host both our library and the museum library. Volunteers must go through an orientation by a museum representative. Please think about working and if you would like to be Chairperson, please contact an officer. We will have a sign up sheet at the May meeting.

~DATES TO REMEMBER~

11-13 Sep 2009 – Eastern Washington Genealogical Society and Washington State Genealogical Society will have the combined seminar/annual meeting in Spokane at the historic Davenport Hotel.

Welcome to all new and returning members', please feel free to ask any genealogy questions you may have. We are all here to help each other find our way on the ancestor trail.

10 Common Research Mistakes

- Failing to record information on standard genealogical forms
- Ignoring the siblings of the ancestors you are researching
- Overlooking the maiden names of female ancestors
- Assuming you are related to a famous person who shares the same surname
- Skipping a generation
- Assuming a family name is only spelled one way
- Jumping to conclusions based on insufficient evidence
- Researching the wrong family
- Relying on online data found in a family tree
- Failing to document your sources

While learning from your own mistakes may be a wonderful way to learn, learning from the mistakes of others is far less painful. (article by Terry & Jim Willard, printed in Ancestry May/June 2005)

DNA Genealogy
How it works and doesn't

With rare exceptions, every human being has exactly 46 chromosomes, which are made of DNA. These chromosomes determine a person's inherited traits. Eye color, height, the shape of your hairline—it's all there somewhere. In all but two of these chromosomes, the DNA from both parents is blended together thoroughly to form something completely new. But one pair of chromosomes works differently. That pair's sole function is to determine the sex of the baby. The chromosome the mother contributes to that pair always has the value of X. The father, though, can contribute either another X chromosome or a Y chromosome. If it's an X, the child will be female; if it's a Y, the child will be male. Therefore, the Y chromosome's route is very easy to follow; it goes from father to son to son to son and so on. Part of the mother's genetic contribution is something called mitochondrial DNA, or mtDNA. While it is not a chromosome (it's actually something of an energy source for cells), it is passed from the mother to all her offspring, regardless of sex. So all children of one mother have the same mtDNA, as do all children of that mother's daughters (though not of her sons, since men can't pass on mtDNA). As it happens, both Y chromosomes and mtDNA evolve, or mutate, very slowly—think millennia, not generations. This means that if you can pick up either the Y chromosome trail or the mtDNA trail, you can follow it back hundreds of years. If you're a woman, you follow only your mtDNA trail, unless you have a brother (or a cousin who's the son of your father's brother) who can take a Y chromosome test on your behalf.

Many companies offer genetic genealogy services. How to choose? The basic service—analyzing your DNA—is pretty much the same everywhere. The difference lies in what extra features are offered. Family Tree DNA has the largest database of potential matches. Options include software that calculates how far back you and a particular match share a common ancestor. www.familytreedna.com. Ancestry.com's database of potential matches is smaller, but its more conventional genealogical resources, such as online searches of vital records and other archival materials, are vast.

www.dna.ancestry. National Geographic's Genographic Project seeks to trace the "genetic odyssey" of mankind. Volunteers learn their "haplogroup," whose common ancestor lived tens of thousands of years ago. No matching with anyone.

www.nationalgeographic.com/genographic. There is a fee for this service for all 3 listed. (from an article by Richard Rubin in the Mar-Apr issue of AARP magazine.)

OBITUARIES MOVED

As some of you are aware, the museum has been keeping obituaries on file in their Lewis County Library for several years. As free space has been declining, a decision was made to move the obituary files to the Lewis County Genealogical Society's Library. Copies of obituaries can still be made in the museum library.

QUIZ TESTS KNOWLEDGE OF GENEALOGY TERMS

Myra Vanderpool Gormley, columnist with the Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Genealogists not only have to learn how to research, but must master some legal terms, land measurements, old occupations, diseases, and a bit of Latin, plus get a real grip on historical dates and events. Try this quiz to test your genealogical acumen.

- 1) You have found your great-grand mother referred to as a relict. Once you get over the shock, what does that tell you about her husband? (He was dead. It comes from the Latin "relicta", meaning the one left. Technically a relict was the widow and relictus was a widower, but relict is the term often used to describe either.)
- 2) This word means ancestor table in German. (Ahnentafel)

- 3) Your ancestor's place of birth is given as "AA" on a census. Where was that? (Born at sea.)
- 4) The Great Wagon Road, down which so many of our ancestors traveled, was a 700-mile road that ran parallel to the Appalachian Mountains from Pennsylvania to where? (Georgia)
- 5) A Latin term that means that you "cause (it) to be done" referring to writ of execution commanding the sheriff to levy and make the amount of a judgment from the goods and chattels of the judgment debtor. (Fieri facias).
- 6) What was a Gretna Green marriage? And, where did it take place? (A runaway marriage. The name comes from the village Dumfries County, Scotland, just across the English border, where many English couples went to be married quickly with a minimum of hassle.)
- 7) When citing the source for a family Bible record, what is the first information that should be included in your citation? (Name and principal residences (if known) of original owners(s) of the Bible.)
- 8) Do all or most English surnames have a family crest? (A full English coat of arms {known as an "achievement"} consists of: A shield {with the arms painted on it}, and above the shield, a helm or helmet; hanging from the helm, the mantling, a torse or wreath, {being twists of cloth wound around the helmet}, and the crest, sitting on the torse. Many people mistakenly call a shield bearing arms a crest. Arms are not associated with surnames, but with individuals, and in some countries, with families. The fact that your surname happens to be Brown gives you no claim to any of the arms borne by various people named Brown. However, there are many unscrupulous and/or ignorant businesses who are more than happy to promulgate false information about 'family crests' and the subject of armory and to take your money. If you want anything more than a decorative wall piece, these commercially offered "family crests" are a waste of money. If you just want a pretty decoration, save yourself some time and money and choose the picture of any arms you like – but don't try to fool your genealogist friends.

- 9) In column 18 {regarding naturalization} on the 1900 census, your ancestor is listed as "PA." What does that mean? (First papers filed; meaning the Declaration of Intention had been filed in court.)
- 10) It was the year the Pony Express started and the eighth census was taken – when was it? (1860.)
